

FAQ

- Why nominate for the Ones to Watch Award?
- Who can be nominated?
- Who can nominate an individual?
- Is there a fee to nominate?
- I have won the award previously. Can I win again? Also, can multiple people from one organization win an award?
- What makes a winning nomination?
- How are Ones to Watch nominations judged?
- What are the deadlines associated with the Ones to Watch Awards?
- Privacy & Confidentiality
- Contact information

Why nominate a candidate for a Ones to Watch award?

The prestigious Ones to Watch Awards provide an opportunity for senior leaders to recognize those technology people within their division or organization who demonstrate leadership traits and routinely go above and beyond to deliver value to the business. These awards can also help build morale and motivate up-and-coming executives to achieve greater excellence and inspire others to do the same. Awards will be presented at the AGENDA18 Conference in 2018, sponsored by IDG's CIO and the CIO Executive Council.

Who qualifies for the award?

The award spotlights rising technology leaders who have what it takes to become strategic, C-level business technology executives of tomorrow. They should not have attained a C-level position at any current or previous organization. Potential candidates should also have a track record of success, an essential blend of communication and collaboration skills, and a keen understanding of business goals. They can be VP-, director- or manager-level professionals who have completed one or more strategic projects that demonstrate their leadership abilities. Candidates should also be responsible for managing projects or team members (or both).

Who can nominate a candidate?

A senior executive or department manager, a peer, an external business partner (i.e. vendor organization) or the candidate themselves may complete the nomination application. The application must contain the name and contact information for the senior executive or business partner to which the nominee reports/works with (directly or indirectly) as well as a 50-word statement from the senior executive/business partner endorsing the nominee. This listing constitutes an endorsement of the nominee by that executive as well as official permission for the nominee to participate in the awards program. CIO reserves the right to contact that executive for verification.

Is there a fee to nominate?

No, there is no charge to nominate a candidate.

I have won the award previously; can I win again? Also, can multiple people from one organization win an award?

Individuals can win a Ones to Watch award only once at their current organization. No more than two individuals at any organization can be honored in the same year. There is no limit to the number of nominations from one organization in a given year.

What makes a winning nomination?

All Ones to Watch entries must be complete to qualify for judging. Applications that are detailed and descriptive and include numbers quantifying project results are more likely to be named a winner. These details will be used only for judging and will be kept confidential. They will not be published in any form.

How are Ones to Watch nominations judged?

Members of the CIO Executive Council and past winners of the CIO 100 award review and score each application, specifically looking at career history, current responsibilities and demonstrated leadership accomplishments. Applications are confidential and will be used solely for the purposes of judging the awards and event speaker recruitment. However, your contact information may be used to market Council and CIO content, programs and services.

What are the deadlines associated with the Ones to Watch Awards?

Applications open: July 31 – October 30

Nominees notified: Week of November 27, 2017

Press release date: Week of December 4, 2017

Conference date: March 19-21, 2018, Miami, FL

Privacy & Confidentiality

Ones to Watch applications will be used solely for the purposes of judging the awards and event speaker recruitment. Your contact information may be used to market Council and CIO content and programs.

Judging results are confidential and will not be shared.

Contact information:

For any questions regarding the Ones to Watch award, including the nomination process and website, please contact Tim Scannell at tim_scannell@idg.com.